WHY INDUCTION

INDUCTION

Induction cooking is a method of cooking that uses copper coils underneath the glass surface to generate electromagnetic energy. This energy transfers directly to your cookware in the contact area to cook food. Use induction-approved cookware.

ADVANTAGES

- Fastest heat-up time (half the time of high-powered gas burners & 70% faster than electric ceran cooking surfaces)
- Digitally controlled temperature precision and reaction time
- Three times more energy efficient than gas (less energy is lost to the surrounding air because the cookware itself becomes the heat source)
- Easy to clean glass surface
- Cooking zones on the cooking surface can be combined for large pots and griddles
- Safer home - the cooking surface does not heat up
